Steve Martin and Martin Short on friendship and why comedy never gets easier

The legendary funny-men open up about their careers, working together and more.

A.D. AMOROSI
letters@metro.us

Steve Martin and Martin Short have shared a friendship for decades, a camaraderie that shows when speaking with the pair as they get ready to hit the east coast for Labor Day weekend with their live production. We caught up with the legendary duo ahead of their stop at Lenox's Tanglewood on Sunday, Sept. 2.

What have you learned about yourself and each other during this tour?

Steve Martin: I actually found that I enjoyed live performance again as I haven't done so in such for a long time. I mean, I did the Steep Canyon Rangers shows with Edie Brickell, but that was different, that was all music. I hadn't performed comedically on a live stage since 1981. I do also know the reason that I am enjoying performing live is that I have a great partner. I wouldn't be enjoying this as much if it was just me. In that case, I would be alone backstage thinking, afraid. Now, there's Marty and the band. Everyone is joking around before the show.

Martin Short: I have to be honest. I don't know that I've learned so much, that I didn't know. Steve's work ethic, his focus, his writing abilities. His dedication to giving 100 percent for any job, no matter what the circumstance is always astounding. I knew that though.

Even for Steve Martin and Martin Short, comedy is still hard. GETTY IMAGES

What percentage of the show are you riffing?

Martin: Lenny Bruce once reminded people that his act may have seem ad-libbed, but he was adamant that he ad-libbed maybe three minutes, tops. Our show? We ad lib maybe five, maybe 10 or none. We're planners. You got to have a reason to ad lib. One ad lib in one show could turn into a three minute routine in a subsequent show. You're gingerly trying material from one town to another town.

Short: Steve has written books and plays and started as a writer. I started as an improviser. His focus comes from that tradition. I'll give you an example: Steve loves to tweet. I'm not so comfortable with it. With him, there is a certain ease. We were going to a Vanity Fair party, and I remember looking over at him, tweeting. He wrote that he was anxious to get to know Cher on a first name basis. Now that is a great joke and if I had thought of it I would tweet that out too.

How have you changed since you first met each other 35 years ago?

Martin: For me, it is the fact that I am looking at the end of a career. There is a certain kind of acceptance of that, and of us. With that, I feel more relaxed about going out there, onstage, because audiences have paid to see us with positive emotions regarding who we are. Sort-of. It just feels easier.

Short: It feels easier, but I will say that one of the misconceptions of being in comedy for many years the assumption is that it gets easier. It doesn't. Like doing television as I did a new series two years ago, "Maya and Marty" (with Maya Rudolph). That new show had the same level of stress as when I did "Saturday Night Live." That doesn't change for me. Once you sit back and say you have made it, you really should just quit.

Are there qualities you envy in each other?

Martin: Everyone likes Marty. I don't have that.

Short: Everyone knows you.

Martin: Yes, Marty, but no one is saying, "I wish I were a little less likable —"

Why John Cho originally rejected 'Searching'

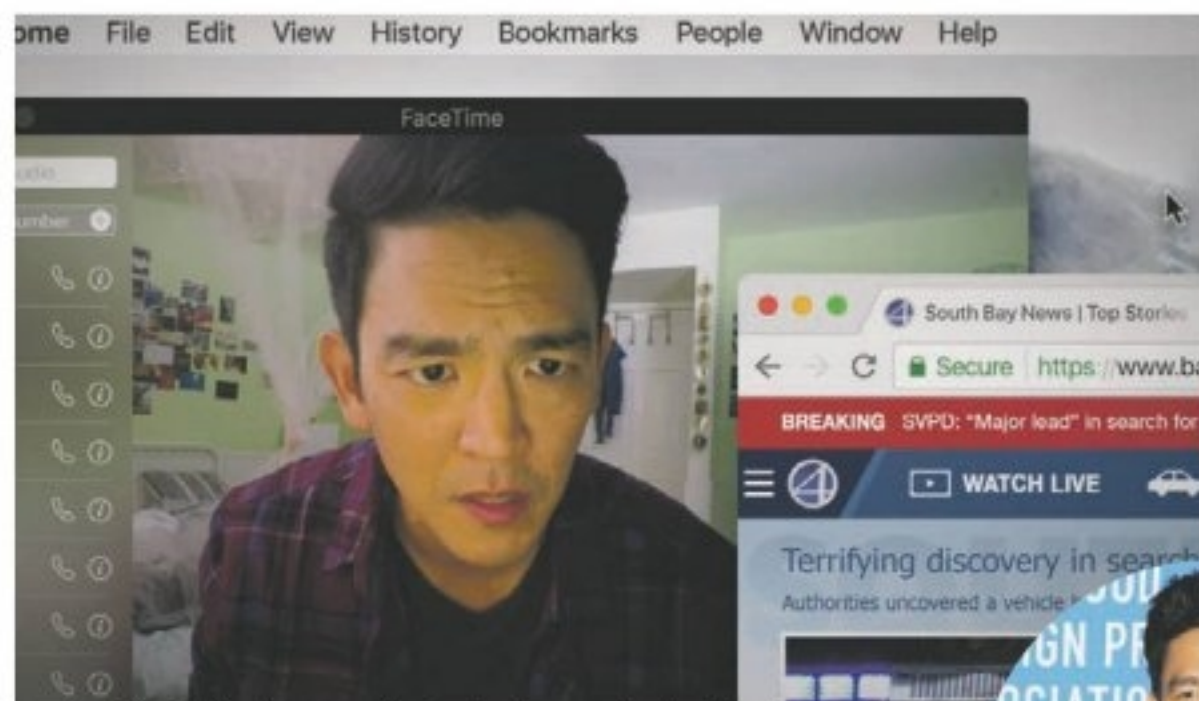

"I didn't want to make a YouTube video. I wanted to make a movie."

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

"Searching" was met with widespread acclaim after it premiered at the Sundance Film Festival in January. Told almost entirely from a computer screen, audiences waxed lyrical about the story of John Cho's David Kim trying to find his missing daughter Margot through her web history, and in the process discovering various mysterious details about her.

But one person who didn't originally see the potential in Aneesh Chaganty and Sev Ohanian's script for "Searching" was Cho himself. Even though it was a script and genre that Cho has long been a fan of, the actor initially rejected director Chaganty's approach.

It took a while for John Cho to get on board with the concept for "Searching." SCREEN GEMS

"The bump was how they wanted to do it, which was on screens," explains Cho. "That wasn't something that I was particularly into."

"I did pass at first. But then Aneesh came back at me. Because I didn't want to make a YouTube video. I wanted to make a movie. And he then convinced me that that was what we were making."

he added. "I didn't want it to be a stunt, to put it on the screen. I thought it would diminish the cinematic experience, being on the small screens."

There was another reason why Cho turned Chaganty down.

"I will say that part of the problem was, when I had my conversation with Aneesh, the director-writer, it was over the phone," he says. "I think we didn't really connect because it was through this device, and it wasn't until we got face to face. Because he reached back out and said that he wanted to meet me again."

Cho adds, "It was his force of personality that made me say, 'I think we have a shot at doing this. And if anyone does, this guy does.'"

Once Cho had finally signed up to star in "Searching," he quickly formed a tight bond with Chaganty, especially because he had to take a huge "leap of faith" with what was being captured.

"Normally, I think I am much more involved. That is to say, that I am always very involved with a director," says Cho. "But in this case I had to trust him. I had to say, 'Did we get it? Are we there?' a lot more to him."

"I had to rely on his opinion a lot more because there was so much that I couldn't see. Even on the day, when I was having conversations with people, I didn't see anything that was on the screen," he adds. "It was all just unlike anything that I had done before, so I felt like I wasn't in control of my performance in the way that I like to feel I am in control of my performance."

Despite his initial concerns and the required adjustment, it was all worth it for Cho, who is overjoyed with how "Searching" has turned out.

"I was just happy I said yes. Because the movie really works," says Cho. "I am really happy to be a part of, let me put it this way: it is really hard to be a part of anything unique in cinema."

"It is a movie that we couldn't have made 10 years ago," he adds. "I just feel like this is the first possible moment to make a movie like this."

"Searching" opens in theaters Aug. 31.

'Destination Wedding' is the most surprising movie of 2018

Director Victor Levin talks working with Keanu Reeves and Winona Ryder on the indie flick.

GREGORY WAKEMAN

When it was announced that Keanu Reeves and Winona Ryder would be pairing up for what was seemingly a romantic comedy about two strangers who come together for the "Destination Wedding," the internet went into overdrive with nostalgia.

The film marks the fourth collaboration between the two beloved actors, after 1992's "Bram Stoker's Dracula," 2006's "A Scanner Darkly" and 2009's "The Private Lives Of Pippa Lee." But rather than being an overly sentimental and preposterously Hollywood rom-com that has the predictable highs, lows and hijinks of its genre peers, "Destination Wedding" actually has much more in common with the arthouse European movies of the 1960s and 1970s. As a former writer on "Mad Men," "Destination Wedding's" writer and and Ryder clearly have a ball with the script. We caught up with Levin to chat about making what could be the most surprising movie of 2018.

What sort of audience do you think this movie can find?

The audience for this movie is people who are interested in these questions. There's the question of bouncing back, but also several other questions are touched upon along the way. Most of these things are discussed through dialogue. They are not played out through events. These are two people at the exiles table at a wedding. They are far from the center of things, happiness and life, and they are left to their own devices. They don't like the weekend, they don't like each other, they don't like themselves very much. But there is nothing else to do but talk and air your grievances, and in that process, they get to know each other and recognize a spark in one another.

It feels like a European film from the '60s.

I am glad it feels that way. I love those movies. I am massive fan of Eric Rohmer. Watching his films and the body of the French New Wave, this idea definitely stayed with me that a good conversation is perfectly legitimate moviemaking. It doesn't have to be a play or a novel. It can be a movie if the conversation is good enough, if the actors are good, if the material is good, if the film is physically attractive.

director Victor Levin obviously makes sure that the dialogue is witty, crisp and deep, while Reeves

It seems like the film's main motif is the lost art of the conversation.

In my opinion the public discourse, having a great deal to do with our politics has become so harsh and such a constant backbeat to our existence that I wanted to put that in the film. I feel like it is so hard to be our best when whenever you turn on the television, radio and find yourself in a political discussion with friends, there is an edge that could easily be mistaken for rancor. This wasn't how it was when I was growing up. People disagreed and were angry but it wasn't bilious or acidic as this. It was a more straightforward kind of conflict. The current public discourse feels terrible to me. It feels evil. If you're a person that is struggling with their own issues, as these two characters are, and you're living in a world that constantly tells you how nasty it is, then it becomes that much harder for you to recover and get to a place of happiness.

Everything you need to know about the Red Bull BC One Cypher Boston 2018

The b-boy competition takes over the Hub this weekend. MATT JUUL

Some of the best break dancers in the country will show off their moves at the Red Bull BC One Cypher Boston 2018.

The competition will feature a number of notable b-boys, including Illinois' P Nut, New York's Pop, as well as Philadelphia's Box Won, Ookie and Supajosh. The Hub's own Brian Pistols is also set to compete this weekend, and he couldn't be happier to throw down in his hometown.

"To compete in such a high-caliber event right in Boston is very exciting for me and it is an honor for me to represent home," Brian Pistols tells Metro. "Last year I traveled to Chicago to compete in the Red Bull BC One open qualifier so to be able to wake up in my own home on the day of is a blessing. Not having to shake off a long car ride or flight is always a plus."

Some of the top breakers around will throw down at Royale this weekend. PROVIDED

The Lynn native believes the Bay State has a vibrant breaker scene, which is why Boston makes for the perfect location for this weekend's event.

"Massachusetts' breaking scene, in my opinion, is in a very great place," says Brian Pistols. "As a community leader in the scene, I see a lot of inspired and motivated breakers and I take it as a responsibility to make sure we have quality events to ensure that this culture gets passed on the righteous way for the people in our scene to thrive."

Ahead, here's everything you need to know about Red Bull BC One Cypher Boston 2018.

What is Red Bull BC One?

Red Bull BC One is one of the biggest b-boy competition in the world, featuring thousands of dancers who go head-to-head, showing off their break dancing skills in order to win a spot in the finals. This weekend's event will allow local competitors the chance to throw down for a chance to make it into the top 16.

Those who make it into the top 16 will face off for a panel of judges in a live-streamed competition that will decide one winner, who'll be flown to the Last Chance Cypher in Zürich on Sept. 27. The winner of that event will then go on to represent the U.S. at the World Final on Sept. 29.

In addition to the competition the Red Bull BC One 2018 event in Boston will also pay tribute to Boston's Valentin "Float" Beceril, a local breaker and member of the Floor Lords who passed away on Aug. 3. Proceeds from the event will be donated to his family.

When is it?

The competition will take place Saturday, Sept. 1, at Royale Boston, at 279 Tremont St. The festivities will kick off at 4 p.m., with the open qualifiers competition beginning at 5 p.m. A tribute to Float will take place at 7 p.m., followed by the start of the live-streamed, top 16 competition at 7:10 p.m. A winner is expected to be crowned by 10 p.m. For more information, check out bcone.redbull.com.

PUT YOUR SHOPPING CARTS AWAY!

People can be very lazy about putting shopping carts away. Why do I have to come out from a store and see a shopping cart in front or on the side of my car? All you had to do was walk a few feet to put it away. Also, for the people that take shopping carts from the store area. You use it to push your packages home then abandon it on a street corner or in front of someone's house. You removed it illegally, push it right back to the store!

GIVE ME SPACE!

I do not understand why people must walk like pack animals. True, it's fun to be out with friends in 95-degree weather, but walking knife in a row on Boston's sidewalks allows nobody else to get through, in either direction. Please, let people have their personal space: It is part of what we are, a country of open spaces and personal freedom.

Aries Take a moment to digest and react to what's happening. Problems with peers, relatives or an employer should be noted and dealt with before they grow worse.

Taurus You are ready to take on the world. Stand tall, trust in your abilities and don't for a minute let someone else take over your interests. Opportunity is within reach.

Gemini Changes are taking place behind closed doors. Consider what's happening and refuse to be left out. Offer insight that will make others take note and invite you to join in.

Cancer How you help others will make a difference. You can let someone take advantage of you or you can set the standard, make the rules and ensure that you are treated fairly.

Leo Beware of anyone pushing you to make an abrupt change. Taking on too many expenses to please someone will cause more stress, making matters worse. Offer only what you can afford.

Virgo Rearrange your schedule to include something that brings you joy. A lifestyle change will encourage you to make an even bigger shift.

Libra A personal change may not be your choice, but accepting the inevitable will lead to benefits. If you discuss your concerns with a former co-worker, something positive will transpire.

Scorpio An interesting concept will get you thinking about different ways to use your money to bring about favorable changes. A partnership will enhance your prospects.

Sagittarius Use your intelligence to come up with an alternative that will work to your benefit. Don't give in to someone trying to pressure you into something you don't need.

Capricorn Look over your personal papers, negotiate contracts or invest your money in something concrete. Refuse to give in to emotional spending and don't try to buy someone's love.

Aquarius A change proposed by others will not live up to expectations. Take the smart route and wait for evidence that supports the promises being made.

Pisces You'll receive the help you need if you ask for it. Much can be accomplished if you are disciplined and ready to implement the changes required to get what you want. A job prospect looks promising. EUGENIA LAST

Biotech and pharma amount to big business for state

More than one-third of all venture capital money invested in biopharmaceutical companies last year went to Massachusetts companies, with the bulk of those dollars headed to companies in Cambridge and nearby, according to a new industry report.

The Massachusetts Biotechnology Council on Wednesday released its annual Industry Snapshot, which tallied a total of $3.1 billion in venture investments in biopharma companies here in 2017, and another $2.7 billion raised by Massachusetts biopharma companies in the first half of 2018.

Cambridge-based companies received 62 percent, or $1.8 billion, of all biotech venture investment in the state, with companies in Boston ($320 million), Waltham ($242 million), Lexington ($129 million) and Woburn ($97 million) accounting for a significant portion of the rest, the report said.

"Massachusetts biopharmas continue to lead the industry in tackling the toughest unmet medical needs, creating a new wave of breakthrough therapies that treat the underlying cause of disease, not just the symptoms, and some that people are even calling cures," MassBIO President and CEO Robert Coughlin said. "Cumulatively, it's creating unbelievable opportunities to change the course of disease and improve the lives of patients, and investors want to be a part of this."

Massachusetts companies accounted for 48 percent of all initial public offerings by U.S.-based biotech companies in 2017, the report said, and the 15 Massachusetts IPOs so far in 2017 account for nearly 40 percent of all U.S.-based biotech IPOs.

The 12 companies that went public in 2016 were concentrated geographically in a similar way as the venture investments, with six located in Cambridge, three in Waltham and one each in Boston, Newton and Burlington.

Jobs in the biopharma industry have increased by 28 percent over the past 10 years, according to MassBIO, hitting 69,941 in 2017 from the 54,280 recorded in 2008.

Those nearly 70,000 workers earned an average annual wage of $145,731.

Sanofi's 4,800 employees make it the Bay State's largest biopharma employer, followed by Shire, with 3,050 workers and Biogen with 2,443. The same trio topped the list last year.

Pressley is ready to make more political history

The Democrat is hoping for the chance to represent Massachusetts's 7th District.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

You may know Ayanna Pressley as the first woman of color elected to Boston City Council, or maybe from the 2016 New York Times list of "14 Young Democrats to Watch." That description is even truer today — Pressley has gained national attention for her congressional race in which she hopes to unseat congressional incumbent Michael Capuano for the chance to represent Massachusetts's 7th District in the House of Representatives.

Metro caught up with Pressley ahead of the 2018 Massachusetts primary election on Sept. 4 to hear about why she decided to run and what she hopes to bring to Congress. You've been with the Boston City Council for eight years. Why did you decide to move on from that and run for Congress? Ayanna Pressley: I am running for Congress because the 7th Congressional District is the most diverse, yet the most unequal district in Massachusetts, and we need inclusive, activist leadership to change that. The election of Donald Trump has highlighted and exacerbated some of those inequities, but they existed long before he entered the White House, and will continue to exist after he leaves, unless we build a movement to address these disparate outcomes.

What's one thing you're most proud of accomplishing in your time with the City Council and how will you expand on that in Congress? Some of my proudest accomplishments on the Boston City Council are related to our work on behalf of women and girls. After being elected to the Boston City Council, I recognized that issues directly impacting women and girls were not receiving enough attention, so I created the Committee on Healthy Women, Families, and Communities. As chair of that committee, I championed the passage of a comprehensive sexual education curriculum in Boston Public Schools, and worked to address policies that lead to the pushout of young women and girls. In Congress, I will continue to champion these issues.

Ayanna Pressley would be the first woman of color to represent Massachusetts in Congress. PROVIDED

Many Bostonians know you since you've been on the Council for years.

How are you connecting with those in the 7th District who many not know you as well? During my career, both as a City Councilor and working for Sen. John Kerry and Rep. Joseph P. Kennedy II, I emphasized working in and with community to elevate the voices of those who are most impacted by issues in our district. When building this campaign's Equity Agenda to address inequities from immigration to public health, we engaged constituents and advocates from across the district to ensure that different communities were able to share their perspectives and solutions.

Our campaign continues to make a proactive effort to reach everyone in the district where they are. I am so moved every day that so many of our volunteers and contributors are engaging in the political process for the first time, giving precious time and resources to help us build and sustain this movement.

What makes you stand out against Michael Capuano as the best choice for that district? If you listen to what we prioritize, there is really a strong contrast in message and tone. Unlike my opponent, our campaign has been focused since Day 1 on calling out the disparities and challenges of the district, all of which existed long before Donald Trump became president, and are only worsening under his administration.

"We need bold, activist leadership that brings the fight to Washington."

I am the only candidate in this race that has laid out a comprehensive Equity Agenda to address the growing inequality in this district, and I have emphasized the need for activist leadership to reverse disparate outcomes in this district. We need bold, activist leadership that brings the fight to Washington.

My opponent and I, along with other Democrats from Massachusetts, would likely vote in a similar way, but we also have some significant philosophical and policy differences. I have rejected corporate PAC money during my Congressional campaign and will not accept it in the future if elected to Congress, while my opponent has accepted nearly $3 million in corporate PAC contributions during his career. Unlike my opponent, I am calling for the defunding of ICE in response to rampant abuses and the policy of family separations, because it should not be a radical notion to uphold the dignity of people and fight for the preservation of families. Recently, my opponent claimed that during the NFL protests, Colin Kaepernick was "wrong in the way he raised the issue" by taking a knee — while I stand in solidarity with those who would use their platform to protest racial discrimination.

You've made a lot of history already, like as the first woman of color elected to Boston City Council. Are you hoping to make more history, and how? I am incredibly proud to be the first woman of color elected to the Boston City Council in its 100-year history, and I am even prouder that there are now six women of color on the 13-member council. If elected, I would be the first woman of color to represent the Commonwealth of Massachusetts in Congress and I hope that it would inspire younger people, especially girls of color, to run for office and pursue public service.

The lens that I bring is certainly informed by my own life experiences and hardships, but more than anything, it's a lens informed by the people I listen to in the community every day. That is the activist leadership that these times require and that this district deserves.

Colleges are making changes for gender-fluid students

As millions of college kids head back to school, we look at some institutions' inclusion initiatives.

NIKKI M. MASCALI
nikki.mascali@metro.us

For many students, heading off to college or back to school can be a time of reinvention — or the first time many of those students, such as those who identify as gender-fluid, can truly feel themselves.

As millions of students across the country head back to school this month, we take a look at some institutions' inclusion initiatives for gender-fluid students.

But first, in case you need a refresher, Census.gov defines gender-fluid as "a person whose gender identification and presentation shifts, whether within or outside societal, gender-based expectations; being fluid in motion between two or more genders."

Many colleges across the country have adapted to their growing gender-fluid student bodies by adding all-gender, aka gender-neutral restrooms or housing.

Starting this fall, Harvard College, Harvard University's undergrad liberal arts school, is offering gender-neutral housing to first-year students, which the school said on its website "re-affirms gender diversity as an important aspect of our campus life by offering a pathway to housing that is not predicated on the notion that there are essential characteristics that render single-gender housing necessary." The option was already available for sophomores, juniors and seniors.

As millions of college students across the country head back to school this month, we take a look at some institutions' inclusion initiatives for gender-fluid students. ISTOCK

In 2016, New York's Columbia University adopted a "preferred name" policy that allows students to change their first and/or middle name on ID cards, class rosters and more. The school also offers medical service coverage for transgender students, gender-neutral bathrooms and more.

"At a time when many hard-won protections and policies are under scrutiny and challenge, our diversity is among our important — indeed, fundamental — institutional values," Suzanne B. Goldberg wrote on the Office of University Life's website last year.

Drexel University in Philadelphia provides students the Gender and Sexuality Resource

Space, which allows students of all sexual orientation and gender identities to use on- and off-campus resources, services and programs to "explore, celebrate and educate the campus community about the diverse gender and sexual identities."

Across town, Temple University's IDEAL — Institutional Diversity, Equity, Advocacy and Leadership — program provides supportive resources, forums, training workshops and more to raise awareness, visibility and advocacy for the LGBTQIA+ community. Additionally, the school offers an annual week of programming for National Coming Out Week (NCOW) in October and centralized information on all-gender bathrooms, gender-inclusive housing and guidance on gender-inclusive personal pronouns at diversity.temple.edu.

GUIDE

Get a leg up with one of these Boston-based MBA programs

Having a leg up can mean all of the difference when it comes to finding a job in the worlds of business and finance. But is there still as much value placed on earning an MBA degree as in the past? In their annual corporate recruiters survey, the Graduate Management Admissions Council reported that in 2017 nearly "seven in ten employers (69%) report that their companies plan to place recent MBA and business master's graduates in data analytics roles in 2017". This proves that there is immense value in earning a higher degree in business when trying to find employment in these fields. Here are two great MBA programs located right here in Boston.

The MBA Programs at UMass Boston

Located on Columbia Point, UMass Boston offers a wide variety of different concentrations within its MBA program. Students can choose to focus on such varied business topics as accounting, entrepreneurship, finance, general management, healthcare administration, human resources management, international business, leadership, marketing, management information systems, not-for-profit management, production and operations management, organizational behavior, supply chain management and logistics, quantitative statistics and operations research, taxes, and technology-based programs.

If you are currently enrolled or about to enroll in the school's business undergraduate programs, the stress on variety and the ground that their MBAs cover should entice you to stay on with this program. The deadline to apply for Spring 2019 classes is Nov. 1, so you still have some time to decide.

MIT Sloan School of Management

Ranked No. 5 among U.S. News' national "Best Business Schools," the MBA program at MIT Sloan School of Management is one of the most exclusive business schools in the country, and for good reason: 84 percent of students who complete the full-time program have gone on to find employment at the time of graduation.

The school offers a wide variety of different concentrations and allows students to personalize their curriculums to a certain degree (pardon the pun).

Innovation is also a crucial component of the experience at MIT Sloan School of Management's MBA program, with a special portion of each student's curriculum being dedicated to something known as the "Sloan Innovation Period." During this time, students participate in SIP workshops focused on ethics and leadership in order to come up with innovative ideas to change aspects of industry from the inside out once they have earned their degrees. The deadline for round one of the application process for the Fall '19 semester is Sept. 25, so you will need to act quickly! PAT KING

Why you should think about tuition insurance before heading off to college

We spoke with Michele Chevalier, senior director, product management at Liberty Mutual about the importance of tuition insurance.

patrick.king@metro.us

Let's face facts: College is expensive. While many students gain valuable experience that can help them to join the workforce, there are many students who experience a variety of hardships during their time at school that may prevent them from graduating or leave them with a hefty amount of debt.

Something that you could never have imagined could leave you struggling trying to cover your bills. According to a study from U.S. News, a total of "3.9 million undergraduates with federal student loan debt dropped out during fiscal years 2015 and 2016." For this reason, many parents are beginning to take out tuition insurance before they head off to school. We spoke with Michele Chevalier, senior director, product management at Liberty Mutual to see why it is important for parents and students to think about the future with these kinds of policies.

Why is tuition insurance necessary?

Tuition insurance protects your financial investment in an undergraduate or graduate education. Putting an academic career on hold can be a difficult decision. Whether it's an injury, an illness or an emotionally difficult time, unforeseen challenges do arise and can come at a cost for students that need to withdraw from school. Purchasing coverage before the semester begins means you're protected.

What is covered in a basic tuition insurance policy?

The tuition insurance policy covers the cost of tuition, room, board and mandatory fees. Customers have the option to insure by semester or full academic year and can choose the amount they are insured for. Most people opt to insure the full amount.

Who is this kind of insurance made for?

Tuition insurance is for undergraduate and graduate students attending most schools in a state where tuition insurance is available.

Tuition insurance with Liberty Mutual is currently available in 14 states: Arizona, California, Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Mississippi, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, South Dakota and Wisconsin.

Are students with pre-existing conditions able to be covered by Tuition Insurance?

Generally, pre-existing conditions are covered, provided the student has no active symptoms and is medically able to attend school when they purchase the policy. Each case is individual, and we encourage prospective customers to visit our website to learn more or to call one of our dedicated customer service representatives.

For more information on Liberty Mutual's tuition insurance plans, visit libertymutual.com/tuition-insurance.

Swim with the manatees at this fantastic Florida resort

Plantation on Crystal River is the perfect place to cure your wintertime blues.

patrick.king@metro.us

As summer winds down, reminders of the brutal cold of the wintry months might slowly start to creep back into your mind. While flashbacks to the polar vortex and the freezing blasts of wind we've experienced on the East Coast might wake you up in the middle of the night, planning a trip down to Florida's Plantation on Crystal River might be the perfect way to break up those cold winter days.

Swim with manatees at Plantation on Crystal River

Florida's Plantation on Crystal River is an extremely unique attraction in that it is the only place in North America where you will be able to legally interact and swim alongside the "cow of the sea" — the adorable manatee. Plantation offers two separate winter packages for visitors who wish to escape the harsh northeast winter for sunny Crystal River. Starting at $298 for a one-night stay for two guests, visitors will be given accommodation in the gorgeous garden view rooms at the Plantation. Once settled in, you will be given a guided manatee snorkeling tour from the Plantation Adventure Center. To make sure that you are prepared, the Center will provide you with a wetsuit, snorkel, and mask so that you will be able to make the most of your time with these incredible animals.

Breakfast for two at the West 82 Bar & Grill will be included the next morning for this starter package. If you would like to increase your stay at Plantation, you can upgrade your package to the Adventure Center Package. Starting at $549 for two guests for two nights, this package includes a complimentary dinner at the West 82 Bar & Grill as well as breakfast in the morning. Guests will also be treated to a guided tour of the Rainbow River, one of Florida's most breathtaking and pristine rivers and largest spring systems. Guests will have access to kayak rentals as well as all-day kayak tours along the river with guided sunset and early-sunrise tour options. Of course, guests will be able to swim with the manatees with the Adventure Center Package as well. You'll just have one more day to enjoy them in all of their glory.

Food at Plantation on Crystal River

We've mentioned the meals that will be provided for you on this special trip, but let's talk about some of the options that will be available during your stay. West 82 Bar & Grill offers meals with some of the freshest ingredients around, with special dishes including she-crab soup, slow-cooked baby back ribs, shrimp and grits, and pan-seared grouper. If you are feeling like something on the lighter side, you can hang out and watch the game at the West 82 bar for some quick snacks as well as some seriously delicious drinks from their full cocktail menu. Located off of Plantation's stellar golf course, you can grab breakfast and lunch daily at the 19th Hole or just a quick beer after hitting the links. For a different pace entirely, check out the Plantation Tiki Bar for some tropical drinks that will put you in the vacation mindset.

Plantation on Crystal River is accessible from all major cities in Florida as it sits 80 miles north of Tampa, 90 miles northwest of Orlando, 125 miles southwest of Jacksonville, and 65 miles southwest of Gainesville. Andrew Zimmern on how a big tip changed his life

The Food Network host talks about his new show, "Big Food Truck Tip," and the struggle of keeping your culinary dreams alive.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

Traveling chef and TV host Andrew Zimmern may be known best for devouring wild entrées and delicacies from all over the world on his long-running Travel Channel show "Bizarre Foods with Andrew Zimmern." But with his new show "Big Food Truck Tip" on the Food Network, he is on a new journey altogether. On this new show, Zimmern will visit food trucks from all over the country and deliver a hefty "tip" of $10,000 to the food trucks that impress him the most. Zimmern recently spoke with Metro about the new show and how innovation and creativity is crucial to keeping a food truck business alive.

Your new show "Big Food Truck Tip" doesn't feature operators competing against each other; rather, you surprise them with a huge tip based on the quality of their food and their overall business model. What made you choose this direction? I teach entrepreneurship at Babson College and I'm always telling my students that I don't compete against other people for anything. I compete against myself. But, I didn't want to do a show where three trucks competed against each other because how does a barbecue truck compete against a dumpling truck that is competing against a Spanish tapas truck? It's just impossible. So I had to create some kind of metric.

It's all part of giving them a grade within themselves. It's basically how well are they doing versus what I think would be the perfect versions of themselves. Because no one is the perfect version of themselves. But I have a great way of imagining it!

Was there a moment when a tip from a customer changed or saved your life?

When I moved to Minnesota 27 years ago, I was on life support. I spent months and months in the Hazelden continuum of care — primary treatment, and then in a halfway house as a very sick addict and alcoholic. I was working as a dishwasher in restaurants just very anonymously with my head down just trying to focus on my recovery. Then, very quickly through a strange turn of events, I ended up taking over the kitchen of a restaurant in town and turned it into our first really great French bistro in the Twin Cities. I was probably nine months sober, so I was three months into running the restaurant. I wasn't making any money. I came into sobriety hundreds of thousands of dollars in debt to the IRS. Insurance only covered half of all my treatment costs so I had that debt that I was paying back. I had no money. Everything that I made went straight to somebody else.

I cooked a meal for somebody's birthday and the host came into the kitchen and put $500 into my pocket. I almost passed out. I was nine months sober and I never considered doing something for myself that made me happy. I was so focused on repaying the debt. So focused on doing all of the hard work that was in front of me. I had so much shame from the last year of my using. I was sick and confused at nine months. It takes years and years of sobriety to start to think clearly and to start to practice some healthy self-love and all of that other stuff. That money really made a huge impact on me.

On a bigger scale, many food truck operators are just trying to get by. It's not a really good business model. What it is, is a very good business opportunity. I know almost no one who comes into it with a three-year plan and a real way in which they are going to create a regular, growing profit stream. The great thing about food trucks is that it's a way for entrepreneurs to get into the food game in a very inexpensive way. What happens immediately is that everyone realizes that some days are too hot and humid, some days are rainy and cold, some days there's snow, some days your truck gets a flat tire ... All of that stuff goes out the window the minute you open that truck. I think it's really crucial for truckers to be as creative as they are because it's an extremely hard business.

It feels like we do this every year.

"The Patriots need another wide receiver."

OK, "need" is a little strong. So let's try that again: It "wouldn't hurt" if the Patriots acquired another wide receiver.

We're just a little over a week away from the Week 1 kickoff, as the Pats host the Houston Texans at Gillette Stadium next Sunday at 1 p.m. The schedule, right out of the gate, is not easy. After Houston, they'll go to Jacksonville in Week 2, then to Detroit in Week 3, then back home in Week 4 to host the Miami Dolphins, which is never a layup as a divisional showdown.

The Patriots will also play against several Super Bowl contenders this season — Green Bay, Minnesota, and Pittsburgh — but let's focus on the first four games for now, because that's when the Patriots will be needing another wide receiver the most.

Sorry, I meant to say, that's when it wouldn't hurt them to have another wide receiver. Julian Edelman will miss the first four weeks with a PED suspension. Brandin Cooks was traded to the Rams. Danny Amendola signed with the Dolphins. Malcolm Mitchell was released. And Eric Decker has retired.

The depth chart at wideout, to begin the season, includes Chris Hogan, Cordarrelle Patterson, and Phillip Dorsett. Rob

Dez Bryant has been available for months but his price tag may finally be right for the Patriots. GETTY IMAGES

Gronkowski is technically a tight end, but we all know he'll be Tom Brady's No. 1 target, so let's acknowledge him as such. And you can't forget about the Patriots' running backs who will undoubtedly be used in the passing attack, in James White and Rex Burkhead.

Still, unless you are high on Patterson or Dorsett as receivers, there's room for another playmaker on the outside.

Yes, I'll say it. There's room for Dez Bryant.

Bryant is a free agent. He turns 30 in November. Some call him a "troubled" wideout. Most of that "some" are in Dallas.

The Cowboys decided to part ways with Bryant this offseason, and leaks out of Arlington question his leadership and competitiveness, all while pointing out his drops as just one example of his "declining skills."

But really, when you hear Bryant's name, what do you think of? You think of a receiver who's upset with his quarterback on the sideline. On TV, that's a bad look. But a little context might help us understand it.

Is Bryant a bad leader? Or was he frustrated with a young offense that had a quarterback who wasn't ready to take his team to the next level?

What comes first, the chicken or the egg? Is Bryant a selfishly loose cannon, or is Dak Prescott making infuriatingly bad mistakes?

Could it be possible that Bryant just wants to win?

On Monday night, Bryant tweeted, "I just have to take care of me first." He also tweeted, "I will play ball this year just might be a lil bit later in the year. We will see."

About 10 minutes later, he tweeted, "I can sign before this season start, if I don't, I will make less money which more likely to happen. I want to be right. That's my focus right now. Life is great over here."

This came just days after a report said the Cleveland Browns offered Bryant a one-year deal worth less than $5 million. At this point, Bryant will probably have to accept a one-year deal at a discounted rate, in which case he'd be gambling on himself. And no offense to the Browns, but if he's going to play for less than $5 million, he might as well do it for a team like the Patriots.

Because maybe he just wants to win.

Sox need to keep foot on the pedal

Despite 90-plus wins, the Red Sox cannot afford to coast through September.

MATT BURKE
matthew.burke@metro.us

The Red Sox (91-42) would be wise to beat up on the hapless White Sox (52-80) this weekend in Chicago as the month of September could wind up getting messy if they don't take care of business.

Boston has five series in September against teams likely to make the MLB playoffs as they will face the Braves in Atlanta, the Astros at home, the Indians in Cleveland and the Yankees at home — and at Yankee Stadium. The two Yankees series could be particularly interesting considering that they both happen toward the end of the month. The Sox currently hold a 6.5 game lead over their longtime rivals. If New York keeps things relatively status quo, it will have a chance of overtaking the Sox for the division with six head-to-head matchups against them in the final 12 days of the regular season.

The Red Sox obviously want no part of a one-game wild card game, so it's essential that they build up a comfortable lead again in the division.

Re-setting the rotation

The Red Sox will use the early portion of September to get their pitching rotation in order. Nathan Eovaldi (5-6, 4.15 ERA) needs to prove he's worthy of a playoff roster spot as he'll get the start Friday against Chicago. Eovaldi has given up nine total earned runs in his last two starts alone, and that hot start to his Sox career after being acquired by Tampa Bay in late July seems like eons ago.

On Saturday, Eduardo Rodriguez (11-3, 3.44 ERA) will return to the rotation for the Sox after he was placed on the disabled list in July with a right ankle injury. The lefty's return is a very welcome addition to the pitching staff as Rodriguez was more or less an automatic Red Sox win early in the year. In his three starts in the month of July before the injury, he did not allow one run in 17 innings.

As for the return of the Red Sox's ace, it's still unknown as to when Chris Sale will be back. If the Yankees start to breathe down the Sox's neck, the Sox may call on Sale to stop the skid. Otherwise it looks like he won't pitch until the third week of September.

Sale threw off flat ground for the second consecutive day this week as he continues to work his way back from shoulder inflammation.

A New Sex Pill Takes the Spotlight as the Viagra Patent is About to Expire

A patented pill costing less than $1 a dose stands to help millions of men with failing sex lives; no prescription will be required

By Ray Wilson
Associated Health Press

AHP – A new sex pill is set to take the spotlight with the Viagra patent about to expire. But unlike the former, it won't require a prescription and is priced just under a $1 a dose.

The new pill called Vesele is part of a new class of performance enhancers for men, which work instantaneously on the body and mind triggering arousal and firmer, harder erections.

Formulated with a special compound known as an "accelerator", Vesele can transport its active ingredients faster and more efficiently into the blood stream, where it begins to work its magic.

The patented ingredient blend initiates a process known as vasodilation, which causes arteries and vessels throughout the body to expand. This allows blood to flow directly to penis and genitals, resulting in harder erections which last longer. Cialis and Viagra are based around a similar concept.

But what makes Vesele so remarkable, and what these other sex pills can't do, is that also directs a small portion of this blood flow to the brain, which creates feelings of intense arousal. In laymen's terms, users become incredibly excited and turned on.

This is why the makers of Vesele say their pill has worked so effectively in clinical trials. It stimulates the two most important organs for great sex, the penis and the brain.

The Brain Erection Connection

Until now, medical researchers did not fully understand the brain-erection connection. It has now been made clear with Vesele. When both are supplied with a constant blood flow, men are harder and firmer for longer...and have unbelievable sex drives.

"Most of the research and treatment methods for men's sexual failures have focused on physiological factors and have neglected the emotional ones. For the leading sex drugs to work, like Cialis and Viagra, you need visual stimulation" explains Dr. Henry Esber, the creator of Vesele.

"And although they work for some men, the majority experience absolutely no fulfillment during sex.

According to research published by the National Institute of Health, 50% of men taking these drugs stop responding or can't tolerate their side effects...and on top of that they spend $50 per pill and it doesn't even work half the time.

This is what makes Vesele so different and effective. It floods the blood stream with key ingredients which cause arteries all over the body to expand. The patented accelerator speeds up this process even more.

The result is a rush of blood flow to the penis and brain, helping to create an impressive erection and a surging desire for sex. Often, this is all men need to get going. And when taken regularly, many men say they are energized and aroused all day."

Great Sex At Any Age

With the conclusion of their latest human clinical use survey trial, Dr. Esber and his team are now offering Vesele in the US. And regardless of the market, its sales are exploding.

Men across the country are eager to get their hands on the new pill and according to the research, they should be.

In the trial above, as compared to baseline, men taking Vesele saw a staggering 85% improvement in erection hardness over a four-month period. Their erections also lasted twice as long.

These same men also experienced an astounding 82% increase in the desire for sex (libido/sex drive) and an even greater improvement in overall satisfaction and ability to satisfy their partners.

Many men taking Vesele described feeling horny and aroused through the day. The anticipation before sex was amazing. They were also easily turned on. Their moods were more upbeat and positive, too.

Faster Absorption into the Blood Stream

Vesele is made up of three specialized ingredients: two clinical strength vasodilators and a patented absorption enhancer often called an accelerator. According to an enormous amount of clinical data, each is very safe.

Research shows that with age, many men lose their desire and interest in sex. They also struggle to produce an erection firm enough for penetration.

And although there are many theories as to why this happens (including a loss in testosterone) one thing is certain, inadequate blood flow is virtually always to blame. That's why sex drug manufacturers focus on blood flow, it makes your erection hard.

But what's more surprising, and what these manufacturers have failed to consider, is that lack of blood flow can also kill your sex drive. That's because blood supplies energy for the brain. This energy is required for creating brainwaves that cause excitability and arousal.

Studies show the Vesele stimulates the entire cardiovascular system, including the arteries that lead to both the brain and penis. The extreme concentration of the ingredients combined with the accelerator ensures that this process starts quickly.

Expiring Patent Opens the Door to a New Sex Pill: Vesele is a new pill that cost just $1 a dose does not require a prescription. It works on both body and mind to increase arousal and erection hardness.

The sexual benefits of Vesele are also multiplied as its ingredients build up in the system over time. This is why many men take it every single day.

Recent Studies Show Positive Effects on Women

In the same study referenced throughout, Vesele was also shown to have an amazing (and somewhat surprising) effect on women too. That's because the same arteries and vessels that carry blood and oxygen to the brain and genitals are the same in men and women.

"In our most recent study, women taking Vesele saw a stunning 52% improvement in arousal and sex drive. Perhaps more impressive, they also experienced a 57% improvement in lubrication.

You can imagine why some couples are taking Vesele together. Everything feels better. Everything works better. Everyone performs better. It's truly amazing."

A New Frontier of Non-Prescription Sex Pills

With daily use, Vesele is helping men (and women) restore failing sex lives and overcome sexual let downs without side effect or expense.

Through a patented absorption enhancer, the Vesele formula hits the bloodstream quickly, resulting in phenomenal improvements in erection firmness and hardness. By boosting blood flow to the brain, users also experience sexual urges and arousal they often haven't felt in years.

BC could have best season in years

The Eagles have elite talent heading into the 2018 college football season.

RICH SLATE
letters@metro.us

College football gets underway across the country this weekend, and don't look now, but Boston College should actually be pretty solid this season. The Eagles are coming off back-to-back 7-6 campaigns, but 2017 ended with a frustrating 27-20 loss to Iowa in the Pinstripe Bowl at Yankee Stadium. There is cause for optimism around the Heights, though, as BC has a schedule that starts out very favorable before getting into a gauntlet of ACC games late in the season. More importantly, BC has a roster full of good players, including a couple of potentially special talents that don't come around every year to Chestnut Hill.

8 or 9 wins?

With 12 games in 2018 (seven at Alumni Stadium and five on the road), BC at least on paper is built to have some success.

AJ Dillon is poised for a monster season. GETTY IMAGES

Sadly, there is no rivalry game with Notre Dame this year, but the Eagles open with a very winnable matchup against UMass (1-0) on Saturday (1, ACC Network) as they are favored by 18 points. BC hosts FCS Holy Cross the following weekend in what should be a glorified scrimmage before hitting the road to open ACC play at Wake Forest on Thursday, Sept. 13, followed by a non-conference meeting at Purdue on Sept. 22. BC hosts Temple in its final non-ACC game on Sept. 29 before playing two more ACC teams that it can beat: at NC State and vs. Louisville. That's where things ramp up significantly as in a four-week stretch they play what should be the four best ACC teams in a row: vs. Miami; at Virginia Tech; vs. Clemson; and at Florida State. All of those teams are ranked heading into the season. BC closes the regular season by hosting Syracuse on the Saturday after Thanksgiving.

NFL talent

Senior free safety Lukas Denis (an Everett native) and sophomore running back AJ Dillon (a Connecticut native who prepped at Lawrence Academy) have both racked up the preseason honors as both were named second-team All-Americans by Sports Illustrated and the Associated Press. Denis had 83 tackles (46 unassisted and 37 assisted) in 2017 and a whopping seven interceptions (which ranked 7th nationally) as he was named to the All-ACC second team. Dillon has a chance to be one of the best players that BC has ever seen: he's coming off a monster freshman season where he ran for 1,589 yards en route to being named the ACC Rookie of the Year and the ACC Offensive Rookie of the Year (the first BC player to win either award). He's been talked about as a potential Heisman Trophy darkhorse with first-round NFL ability.

Addazio survives

Coming into last season, BC head coach Steve Addazio — now in his sixth year leading the Eagles — was recognized nationally as one of the head coaches at a power-5 school that was most likely to be fired by the end of the season. Instead, BC went 7-6 for the fourth time in his five seasons in charge. He'll never be mistaken for Alabama's Nick Saban or Michigan's Jim Harbaugh, but Addazio has proven to be at least a decent leader for BC despite his goofy proclivity to call his players "dudes." Perhaps his best contribution to the Eagles is the high level of recruits that he's gotten to choose BC. With their high academic standards, BC will never be a football factory, however he's still managed to bring future NFL players to campus year after year.

At the start of the summer, BC extended Addazio's contract through 2020, so he should have a little breathing room to get through what should be another winning season with a bowl game at the end.
